Basket of HOPE brings joy to families

Once a month, telephone operators from the teleservices department at Baptist Memorial Hospital-Memphis file down to the waiting room in the intensive care unit at the hospital.

Some carry boxes and others carry baskets, but all of them smile brightly at the surprise they are about to present.

The hostess working in the ICU waiting room announces the “teleangels” have arrived, and Marquita King, a customer service representative, stands in front of the family members of Baptist patients and recites a poem she wrote especially for them.

“We know you are hurting; we know you are in pain; we send you some goodies to ease your pain,” she says. “Here is a basket; a basket of hope; from the teleservices team who never gave up hope.”

The Basket of HOPE – which stands for Helping Others Pray

Every Day – began after then Baptist Memphis administrator and CEO Jason Little, who is now a vice president with Baptist, challenged all the hospital departments to develop a program to improve patient satisfaction.

Helen Wright, the director of teleservices, was at a loss as to what her department could do. She knew her team played a crucial role in connecting families with their hospitalized loved ones, but for the most part, her team had limited access to patients.

“The only time we visit patients is when we have a family member or friend in the hospital,” she said. “We thought long and hard about what we could do to help the patients have a satisfactory experience while at the hospital.”

Wright thought about her father-in-law, who had spent a lot of time in and out of the ICU during an illness.

Baptist announces leadership changes

Baptist Memorial Health Care recently announced that Zach Chandler, CEO and administrator of Baptist Memorial Hospital-Memphis, and Derick Zeigler, who holds the same position at Baptist Memorial Hospital-Union City, have been promoted.

Chandler will become vice president and regional market leader for Baptist—overseeing operations in Baptist’s six regional hospitals in Tennessee and Mississippi.

Chandler joins fellow vice president and market leader Jason Little, who has operational oversight for Baptist’s seven metro-Memphis hospitals and NEA Baptist Hospital in Jonesboro, Ark.

Ziegler will replace Chandler at Baptist Memphis.

These leadership transitions will officially take place in August.

“We are so excited about having each of these individuals in new leadership roles,” said David Hogan, executive vice president and chief operating officer for Baptist. “All have proven track records of leadership and integrity and are committed to the continued success of our organization.”

Chandler joined Baptist Memphis in September 2009 as the administrator and CEO after spending two years as the president of Methodist Charlton Medical Center in Dallas.

Before that, Chandler spent 10 years with Baptist in a variety of positions, including CEO and administrator of three Baptist hospitals. He earned a bachelor’s degree in business administration from Baylor University in Waco, Texas, and a master’s degree in health administration from Washington University in St. Louis.

Little has been with Baptist since 2002. His first position was assistant administrator and CEO for Baptist DeSoto. Since then, he has served as CEO and administrator of Baptist Golden Triangle, Baptist Collierville and Baptist Memphis. He received his bachelor’s degree in health administration from the University of Tennessee at Knoxville and his master’s degree in business administration and health care administration from the University of Alabama at Birmingham.

Ziegler spent 23 years in health care administration for the United States Army before coming to Baptist. Most recently, he served as deputy commander for administration — a position equivalent to chief operating officer — of Tripler Army Medical Center, a 1,000-bed hospital in Honolulu, Hawaii. He received a master’s degree in social work from the University of Pittsburgh and a master’s degree in health care administration from Baylor University.

Cary joins Baptist Huntingdon as director of radiology

Brad Cary has been named the director of the radiology department at Baptist Memorial Hospital-Huntingdon. He is also the newest member of the hospital's management team.

He earned his associates degree in allied health with a radiology concentration from East Tennessee State University in Johnson City, Tenn., in 2002. He then obtained a certificate of nuclear medicine from Chattanooga State Technical Community College in 2004.

"I am very excited for the opportunity to return home and serve the people of the community where I was born and raised," he said.

Proper hydration and outdoor safety can prevent heat stroke and other illnesses

With longer days and higher temperatures, summer is a time of year when most people suffer from heat stress. Knowledge of warning signs and preventive measures can go miles in keeping yourself safe during outdoor activities in the heat.

Dehydration

Dehydration occurs when the body loses water and other essential body salts. It can be caused by fever, diarrhea, vomiting or overexposure to the sun. Watch young children and the elderly closely, as they are the most susceptible to dehydration.

Symptoms of dehydration include thirst, less-frequent urination, dry skin, fatigue, light-headedness, dizziness, confusion, dry mouth, and increased heart rate and breathing. Children may experience additional symptoms such as having no tears when crying, a sunken abdomen, high fever, listlessness, irritability and a lack of wet diapers for more than three hours.

For mild to moderate dehydration, simple rehydration with cool fluids is recommended. For some moderate to severe cases, intravenous fluids might be required.

Heat exhaustion

Heat exhaustion occurs when a person spends a great amount of time in the heat and does not properly rehydrate. It is most prevalent in elderly people, people with high blood pressure and those who work or exercise in a hot environment. Symptoms include heavy sweating, paleness, muscle cramps, tiredness, weakness, dizziness, headache, nausea, vomiting and fainting.

To treat heat exhaustion, get rest; drink plenty of cool, non-alcoholic beverages; take a cool shower or bath; get to an air-conditioned environment and change into lightweight clothing. If symptoms continue for longer than one hour, consult a physician, as it could mean a more serious diagnosis: heat stroke.

Heat stroke

Heat stroke is the most dangerous form of heat stress. The body becomes unable to properly regulate temperature, and body temperature rises.

Dehydration can also lead to heat stroke because a dehydrated person cannot sweat fast enough to cool the body down, resulting in a rise in body temperature.

Infants, athletes, the elderly and outdoor workers are most susceptible to heat stroke, whose symptoms are similar to those of a heart attack.

Symptoms of heat stroke include headache, dizziness, disorientation, fatigue, seizure, rapid heart beat and even hallucinations.

Heat stroke victims should be brought indoors immediately. Remove clothing, apply cool water to the skin and fan them to stimulate sweating.

They should lie down with their feet slightly elevated, and you may need to apply cool packs to the groin and armpits.

Heat stress can be prevented by following guidelines to stay cool. When participating in outdoor activities, stay hydrated by drinking water and sports drinks. Don't drink sodas, teas, coffee or alcohol, as they can actually worsen dehydration.

Wear lightweight, loose-fitting clothing that is a light color, and schedule all sports activities for the late evening or early morning when temperatures are coolest.

Be sure to wear the proper sunscreen, hat and sunglasses and use an umbrella. Instead of spending large quantities of time outside at once, slowly build yourself up to the heat by gradually increasing the amount of time you spend outside.

When you do spend time in the heat, take frequent breaks and keep yourself cool by spraying your body with cool water.

HOPE Continued from page 1

During that time, her mother-in-law rarely left the waiting room, even if it meant going without a meal. Remembering the other family members who were waiting anxiously for news, she decided the best way her department could help improve patient satisfaction was to provide some sort of comfort to the family members in the waiting rooms.

Wright and patient satisfaction team leader Carolyn Yancy decided to recruit four operators who would start the program. The teleservices team put together a basket of non-perishable food items and activity books to help brighten the day of patients' family members.

"We asked that everyone within our department contribute $1 to our monthly fund or bring in non-perishable food items like peanut butter crackers, chips and juice boxes," said Yancy, a customer service representative. "Helen and our team take the monetary contributions and go shopping for coloring books, activity books and any other items the families might like."

June's Basket of HOPE delivery was emotional for everyone involved. One recipient approached Valerie Rosemon and thanked her for providing the basket.

"She had no money to buy herself something to eat, and then we came in with snacks and activity books," Rosemon said. "She told me she had been praying and asking God what to do about finding her next meal. At that moment the teleangels walked through the door with the Basket of HOPE. It was an overwhelming experience."

The department alternates delivery of the baskets to the ICU and cardiovascular intensive care unit waiting rooms each month. Some months they are able to deliver baskets to both waiting rooms.

"The baskets are so heavy now that it takes two people to carry them," Wright said.

In fact, December's Basket of HOPE consisted of two baskets full of food items for the families in the waiting room, plus two boxes of toys for their children.

"It was such a gratifying experience to see the expressions on the families' faces when we came in with those goodies," Yancy said. "Many of us have been in these waiting rooms before, and it's such a blessing to be able to bring hope to hurting hearts through this ministry."

The Basket of HOPE program has grown exponentially since the team delivered its first basket last year. Friends and family members of the department often donate money or supplies to help prepare the baskets.

The department stores the items for the baskets in several drawers and storage boxes, and when the team is having a rough day, Wright will have them take a break to work on the baskets, which are decorated to go along with the holidays and seasons.

"Every time I see the basket and the joy it brings to the families and the ladies in our department, I think of my father-in-law," Wright said. "He was such a giving person and loved the teleangels very much. I know he would be proud of what we are doing."

For information on how you can help families of patients at Baptist Memphis by donating to the Basket of HOPE, contact Carolyn Yancy or Marquita King at 226-5177.

LEADER'S CORNER

Jason Little, senior vice president and market leader for Baptist Memorial Health Care

Do you remember the story of Nehemiah? He is one of my favorite Old Testament characters.

With God's help, Nehemiah used leadership, commitment and teamwork to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem in only 52 days! The building project brought a sense of pride to the people and stood as a visible reminder of God's love.

We have a number of important building projects under way throughout Baptist Memorial Health Care.

Like Nehemiah, we can be proud of the teamwork and commitment from colleagues across the system helping to make these visions a reality.

Allow me to take you on a quick tour.

Our first stop is at Baptist Memorial Hospital-Collierville. The Baptist Trinity Hospice House and Kemmons Wilson Family Center for Good Grief is a 24-bed residential hospice and counseling center made possible by more than $12 million of contributions raised from employees and friends of Baptist.

The finishing touches are being made, and we will soon open the first facility of its kind in our community dedicated to caring for those in their final days.

The hospice house will provide a home-like environment for the terminally ill and the bereavement center will provide hope and comfort for their loved ones.

On the Baptist Memorial Hospital-Memphis campus, we are awaiting the arrival of three beautiful stained glass windows to complement the front of the Baptist Memphis Education Center and Dr. H. Edward Garrett, Sr. Auditorium.

The center will be dedicated in September and houses meeting spaces and a 250-seat, state-of-the-art auditorium.

The center will be a great location for hospital meetings and physician seminars. It will also serve as an important resource for us to share with our community for their use.

On June 24, the state of Mississippi approved our plans to proceed with construction of a new 30-bed, $10 million behavioral health hospital in Columbus on the Baptist Memorial Hospital-Golden Triangle campus.

We will care for inpatients with mental illness as well as outpatients in need of chemical dependency or other counseling at this facility. Parking lot renovations are ongoing, and we will begin construction on the building in the fall.

Jonesboro, Ark., is the site of our largest building project. We are moving the dirt on a new $300 million hospital and physician office building.

The NEA Baptist Memorial Hospital and NEA Baptist Clinic will be completed in approximately three

Once finished, patients will find a five-story physician office building connected by specialty floor to the new hospital.

For example, if a pregnant patient comes to her OB/GYN's office and needs to be admitted to the hospital, the C-section and labor and delivery rooms are just down the hall.

This striking brick and glass building is a functional representation of what the integrated delivery of health care will look like in the future.

I can just imagine what it felt like in Nehemiah's day to see that wall going up in record time.

They were probably as pleased as I am about our plans to care for those who are dying, for those who have educational needs, for those who have mental illness and for those who need leading-edge clinic and hospital care.

These are all important ministries. While we can't get them all built in 52 days, it is a wonderful blessing to see our Baptist team in action.

MORE NEWS AND EVENTS

Baptist Golden Triangle begins new construction projects

Baptist Memorial Hospital-Golden Triangle has begun two construction projects totaling more than $11 million: a new behavioral and mental health facility and a parking lot expansion and renovation project.

The parking lot is projected to be completed this fall, just as construction will begin on the new building, which is set to open in early 2012.

"The new parking lot is slated for early completion to ensure adequate parking for employees and the public when construction of the new building begins," said Bill Lancaster, the hospital's assistant administrator who is in charge of both projects. "The facility's construction will eliminate one existing employee parking lot."

The new parking lot for patients and visitors, which includes additional handicapped parking, is being built along Fifth Street in front of the main building. Employee parking on the north side of the building is being expanded east to Baptist Boulevard. The existing north employee parking lot will be resurfaced, restriped and improved, including correcting drainage problems.

Recently, the Mississippi State Department of Health approved the certificate of need for the 26,100-square-foot psychiatric and chemical dependency facility, Lancaster said. The building will be connected to the north side of the hospital's main building.

The facility will serve patients on both an inpatient and outpatient basis and will include a 14-bed closed unit and two eight-bed open units, he added.

One wing will be dedicated to senior adults with psychiatric and chemical dependency problems.

"We will continue to provide inpatient psychiatric and chemical dependency services for those 18 and older who need psychiatric hospitalization and medical detoxification," said David Johnson, director of mental health at Baptist Golden Triangle. "Partial hospitalization, or a 'step-down' program after inpatient hospitalization, is also available for patients who stay at the facility during the day to participate in daily group therapies and therapeutic activities, but go home in the afternoon."

The facility will offer outpatient chemical dependency services for adults with chemical dependency problems. Individual, couples and family counseling, group therapy, and medication management will also be available.

"We are excited about having this new facility because it will enable us to better meet the needs of our patients and staff in an environment-friendly atmosphere that affords safety and security," Johnson said.

The new facility will replace the aging Willowbrook building, which currently houses the hospital's behavioral and mental health services. That building was constructed in the 1980s and will soon require substantial renovation and repairs.

"We remain committed to those in our area with behavioral and mental health problems," said Paul Cade, administrator and CEO of Baptist Golden Triangle. "Our new facility will allow us to build on our existing services in a modern facility located closer to our main hospital building."

The hospital's ambulance service and outpatient rehabilitation services, which are also housed in the Willowbrook building, will be relocated to other areas on campus.
